Informed Consent Principles

AGOSCI and Two Way Street are committed to ensuring informed consent is accessible and inclusive for people with communication disability. This includes:

- Providing information in plain language, Easy Read, aided language and/or visual formats
  - Extra time may be needed for understanding, reflection, and response
  - Supporting multiple communication methods, including:
    - AAC (Augmentative and Alternative Communication)
    - Key word signing
    - Visual aids or symbols
    - Videos, audio, or supported conversation
  - Respecting all forms of consent, including verbal, written, visual, or aided communication

Consent Statement

We recognise that people communicate in different ways. If you are applying for a mini Partnership payment and use alternative ways to communicate, you are encouraged to use support to:

- Understand what the Partnership payment involves
- Ask any questions you have
- Talk about whether you want to take part

Consent can be given in different ways — including using speech, AAC, sign, symbols, gestures, writing, or with the help of a trusted person.

We will provide accessible information and are happy to support this process if needed.

What Informed Consent Means in This Project

For this project, informed consent means:

The person with disability...

Understands what the honorarium/project is about

Knows what they're agreeing to (e.g. sharing work, use in toolkit)

Feels comfortable to say yes or no

Can withdraw consent at any time

Can express consent in their own way

How AGOSCI supports this

Plain Language and Easy Read materials available

Visual explanations or supported conversation if needed

No pressure; support from a trusted person encouraged

This is always respected and explained clearly

All forms of communication are respected and accepted

Special Note on Supporters and Decision-Making

If someone is applying with support from a family member, support worker, peer, or ally:

- That supporter should facilitate the person's decision, not make the decision for them.
- The Partnership payment process follows a supported decision-making approach, not substitute decision-making.

If a person is supported to apply or participate, they should be assisted to understand the project and make their own decision. The role of a supporter is to help with communication and understanding, not to make the decision on the person's behalf.

Consent Template Language

- I understand what this project is about and I want to be part of it.
- I understand my work may be shared in the Mentoring Toolkit and/or AGOSCI/Two Way Street website or materials.
- I gave this consent using my preferred way of communicating (e.g. talking, signing, AAC, with support).
- I know I can change my mind at any time.
- I gained consent in another way _____

11. Support and Communication

AGOSCI and Two Way Street are available to support you throughout the project. If you have questions, need help making your work accessible, or experience barriers to completing your project, we encourage you to get in touch early.
